Recreation

Degree: A.A. - Recreation Management

Recreation professionals are people in leadership, supervisory, and administrative capacities who are employed in the parks, recreation and leisure services field as activity leaders, facility managers, and program supervisors.

Recreation managers are responsible for a given area of activity, tournament, show, or special event. Some provide instruction and leadership in sports and game activities, arts and crafts and aquatics, while others conduct classes in music, dance, drama, outdoor recreation and physical fitness.

Career Opportunities

Throughout the U.S., more than 300,000 people are employed with a primary concern for the provision of recreation and park facilities and services in federal, state, municipal and voluntary nonprofit agencies. In addition, several times that number are employed in commercial and private recreation related positions.

Travel and tourism, club management, resort recreation, food and beverage services, lodging, professional sports, entertainment and cultural services, and many other services are very much a part of the exploding recreation and leisure services market. Recreation students can move into positions of more responsibility through experience and additional education. Many ARC students, after completing their A.A. requirements, will transfer to a four-year program to continue their education toward a bachelor's degree. Special agreements between ARC and other institutions now provide our students with a smooth transfer to many of the four-year programs in the state.
